

US State Dept Deletes Sadistic Hit List Boasting of Venezuela's Ruin

Grayzone has obtained a list of "key outcomes" that include wrecking the nation's economy, destabilizing its military and puppeteering its political opposition, reports Anya Parampil.

By Anya Parampil

Grayzone

On April 24, six days before self-proclaimed Venezuelan "interim president" Juan Guaidó's attempt to violently overthrow Venezuela's democratically elected government alongside a handful of military defectors, the U.S. State Department published a fact sheet that boasted of Washington's central role in the ongoing coup attempt. After realizing the incriminating nature of its error, the State Department quickly acted to remove the page.

The Grayzone has obtained a full copy of the expunged report. The deleted page puts to bed any claims of Guaidó's independence from Washington, as the State Department emphasizes the fact that he "announced his interim presidency... in January" at the the top of a section dedicated to breaking down "key outcomes" of U.S. efforts with regard to Venezuela.

U.S. Assistant Secretary of State for Western Hemisphere Affairs Kimberly Breier recently took to Twitter to claim that "since he became acting president, Juan Guidó has given tangible results to the people of Venezuela." Her tweet was accompanied with an infographic detailing alleged accomplishments of the powerless coup administration based on data compiled by the legally defunct National Assembly, the only governing body actually controlled by Guaidó.

Since becoming Interim President, @JGuaido has delivered tangible results for the people of #Venezuela. #EstamosUnidosVE <https://t.co/h0kfd9DEkFpic.twitter.com/spblSnooEa>

– Kimberly Breier (@WHAAsstSecty) May 1, 2019

But the Venezuela fact sheet posted and then deleted days earlier by the State Department told a dramatically different story.

Read the entire expunged fact sheet here [PDF] and at the end of this article.

Economic Hit List

Entitled “U.S. Actions on Venezuela,” the document boasted that U.S. policy had effectively prevented the Venezuelan government from participating in the international market and has led to the freezing of its overseas assets. It read like a sadistic celebration of Washington’s retribution against the Venezuelan population as a whole, the kind of collective punishment which is illegal according to Article 33 of the Geneva Conventions.

The State Department gloated in the deleted fact sheet that its policy had ensured that the Maduro government “cannot rely on the U.S. financial system” to conduct business, noting “key outcomes” of U.S. actions include the fact that “roughly $3.2 billion of Venezuela’s overseas are frozen.” It went on to boast that “Venezuela’s oil production fell to 736,000 barrels per day in March... substantially reducing” government revenue.

US Department of State Deleted Venezuela Hit List by Max Blumenthal on Scribd

“If I were the State Department I wouldn’t brag about causing a cut in oil production to 763,000 barrels per day – which is a 36 percent drop, in just the two months of February and March this year,” Mark Weisbrot, co-director at the Center For Economic and Policy Research, told The Grayzone. “This means even more premature deaths than the tens of thousands that resulted from sanctions last year.”

Weisbrot recently co-authored a bracing report which found that 40,000 Venezuelans died between 2017 and 2018 as a direct result of U.S. sanctions. The State Department patted itself on the back for announcing its preparedness “to provide an additional $20 million in initial humanitarian assistance” to Venezuela, however, the CEPR report concluded that Trump Administration sanctions implemented in August 2017 resulted in “a loss of $6 billion in oil revenue over the ensuing year” alone.

While the State Department praised the opposition for “providing medical and hygiene attention to over 6,000” Venezuelans, those numbers dwarf in comparison to the 300,000 people CEPR “estimated to be at risk because of lack of access to medicines or treatment... [including] 80,000 people with HIV who have not had antiretroviral treatment since 2017, 16,000 people who need dialysis, 16,000 people with cancer, and 4 million with diabetes and hypertension.”

In other words, the supposed “Venezuela Crisis Response Assistance” touted by the State Department is not even a band-aid over the gaping wound that U.S. unilateral coercive measures have inflicted on the country.

In Weisbrot’s view, the “policy” and “outcomes” promoted by the State Department in the disappeared document will merely lead to “more cuts in imports of medicine, food, medical equipment, and inputs necessary to maintain water, health, and sanitation infrastructure.”

Having denied the Venezuelan government the ability to provide for its own population, the U.S. has essentially promised that thousands more deaths will occur.

The State Department did not respond to The Grayzone's request for a comment on the fact sheet it deleted.

'List of Confessions'

In a recent interview with Grayzone, Venezuela's ambassador to the United Nations, Samuel Moncada, characterized the deleted State Department fact sheet as "a list of confessions."

"Imagine if any other country says... it's proud of saying that we are destroying the economy of our neighbor; we are proud that we destroyed the political system of our neighbor; we are proud that they are suffering. They are saying we are waging war against Venezuela," Moncada emphasized.

The ambassador went on to accuse the U.S. of engaging in "bullying" rather than international diplomacy.

The State Department's own fact sheet appears to support this accusation, as it asserts "diplomatic pressure resulted in fewer markets for Venezuelan gold." The document further highlighted U.S. actions that have supposedly led "more than 1,000 members of the military [to recognize] Juan Guaido as interim President" and defect to Colombia, as well as stranding "an estimated 25 crude oil tankers with 12 million barrels" off Venezuela's coast.

"They [say] it's our 'key' achievements," Moncada commented. "They are saying that they are causing trouble in our military and inducing a military coup, [which] so far they haven't achieved, but they are working towards."

"If any other person says that themselves," the ambassador concluded, “and you take that confession to court, they would be in prison.”

The State Department’s fact sheet even frames recent decisions by the Organization of American States, Lima Group, Inter-American Development Bank, and European Union to either recognize or support Guaidó’s shadow administration as a U.S. achievement, highlighting Washington’s outsized influence within each of these supposedly international governing bodies. The decision to mention the E.U. and Lima Group is particularly noteworthy considering the United States is not a member of either organization.

“They are so far out of any normal parameters of decency, morality, legality, reason, that really they are dangerous,” Moncada said of the Trump administration. “They are a real threat to international peace, and they are a real threat to my people.”

Anya Parampil is a Washington-based journalist. She previously hosted a daily progressive afternoon news program called “In Question” on RT America. She has produced and reported several documentaries, including on the ground reports from the Korean peninsula and Palestine.

---