

From the Archive Series

Some special stories pulled from Consortiumnews.com's Archive:

Steve Bannon's Apocalyptic 'Unravelling'

Republished August 19, 2017: Ousted White House strategist Steve Bannon was a perplexing mix of populist, operative and opportunist, but his political theories crossed into the apocalyptic and bizarre, as Alastair Crooke described in March 2017.

How NSA Can Secretly Aid Criminal Cases

Republished May 18, 2017: Official Washington is thrilled by the choice of ex-FBI Director Mueller as Russia-gate special counsel, hailing him as a straight-shooter, but he cut some legal corners in office, ex-CIA analyst Ray McGovern wrote in 2014.

David Rockefeller & October Surprise Case

Republished March 21, 2017: David Rockefeller's death at age 101 brought effusive eulogies, but no recollection of his mysterious role in the Iran hostage crisis of 1980, which helped sink President Carter's reelection, writes Robert Parry.

Did Manning Help Avert War in Iran?

Republished January 24, 2017: Though President Obama commuted Chelsea Manning's prison sentence, he showed no appreciation for her brave disclosures, including one that undercut war plans with Iran, Robert Parry reported in 2013.

Warnings from the Cuban Missile Crisis

Republished December 7, 2016: Fidel Castro's death at 90 was treated more as a cultural event than a moment to reflect on the danger of thermonuclear war, a risk Don North saw up close in 1962 and described 50 years later.

George H.W. Bush, the CIA and a Case of State Terrorism

Republished Sep. 21, 2016: Forty years ago, a car-bomb exploded in Washington killing Chile's ex-Foreign Minister Orlando Letelier, an act of state terrorism that the CIA and its director George H.W. Bush tried to cover up, Robert Parry reported in 2000.

The Earlier 9/11 Acts of Terror

Republished Sep. 11, 2016: Americans feel a special sadness about the terrible loss of life on Sept. 11, 2001, but the 9/11 date has other meanings in other countries, reflecting a U.S. hypocrisy on terrorism, wrote Jonathan Marshall in 2014.

Target: Yugoslavia (A Look into the Future)

Republished Aug. 24, 2016: NATO's 1999 war on Serbia showcased some of America's then-cutting-edge strategies for waging electronic sabotage against an "enemy," including hacking computers and controlling information, wrote Robert Parry in real time.

Television Wars (Crossing a Line in Serbia)

Republished Aug. 24, 2016: President Bill Clinton's bombardment of Serbia in 1999 marked a grim turn in the practice of "information warfare," with a lethal NATO attack targeting a Serb TV station which criticized the war, observed war correspondent Don North.

Welcome to Vietnam, Mr. President

Republished Jul. 24, 2016: With still no end in sight for the Afghan War, President Obama can't say he wasn't warned. Barely two months into his presidency in 2009, ex-CIA analyst Ray McGovern welcomed Obama to his own Vietnam quagmire.

Chicago Police Adopt Israeli Tactics

Republished Jul. 11, 2016: Recent cases of white police killing unarmed black men raise concern that some U.S. police are applying counter-terrorism tactics, including some learned at Israeli academies, retired JAG Major Todd E. Pierce wrote in 2015.

The Nasty Blowback from America's Wars

Republished Jul. 7, 2016: New police shooting deaths of two black men – in Louisiana and Minnesota – show the kind of violent blowback that America is facing after decades of imperial warfare abroad, as ex-CIA analyst Ray McGovern wrote in 2015.

Thomas Jefferson: America's Founding Sociopath

Republished Jul. 4, 2016: When Robert Parry's article was posted two years ago, the Thomas Jefferson v. Alexander Hamilton debate vastly favored Jefferson, but the hit Broadway musical "Hamilton" has brought new realism about Jefferson's ugly side.

How Roy Cohn Helped Rupert Murdoch

Republished Jun. 19, 2016: The Washington Post's takeout on Donald Trump's ties to notorious McCarthyite Roy Cohn mentioned Cohn's links to Ronald Reagan and Rupert Murdoch, but there is much more to that, reported Robert Parry in 2015.

Muslim Memories of West's Imperialism

Republished May 17, 2016: A century ago, Britain and France secretly divided up much of the Mideast, drawing artificial boundaries for Iraq and Syria, but Muslim resentment of Western imperialism went much deeper, as historian William R. Polk described in 2015.

Spy v. Spy: The First Patriots Day

Republished Apr. 19, 2016: The traditional Patriots Day falls on April 19, honoring the Minutemen who battled British troops attacking Lexington and Concord in 1775. The British were thwarted, in part, by a little-remembered patriot, as Robert Parry recalled in 2011.

The Victory of 'Perception Management'

Republished Apr. 13, 2016: In the 1980s, the Reagan team pioneered "perception management" to get Americans to "kick the Vietnam Syndrome," an ongoing propaganda structure now justifying endless war, wrote Robert Parry in 2014.

Reagan's Bargain/Charlie Wilson's War

Republished Mar. 30, 2016: The threat from Pakistan's nukes began with Ronald Reagan's deal trading U.S. acquiescence for Pakistani help organizing Islamist militants to fight Soviets in Afghanistan, wrote ex-CIA analyst Peter W. Dickson in 2008.

What's the Matter with John Kerry?

Republished Mar. 14, 2016: As a young warrior and senator, John Kerry stood up to politicians who spread propaganda that got people killed. But, as a Secretary of State in his 70s, Kerry has become what he once challenged, Robert Parry reported in 2014.

Mystery of the Civil War's Camp Casey

Republished Feb. 27, 2016: U.S. history is distorted by the prism of race, even the Civil War, which was fought over slavery but then enshrined white heroes when Jim Crow racism quickly asserted itself, a reality relevant to Black History Month and to Chelsea Gilmour's investigation into the mystery of Camp Casey.

KLA Country (A Forewarning from Kosovo)

Republished Feb. 21, 2016: President Clinton's 1999 air war on Serbia supposedly to stop genocide in Kosovo became the model for neocon/liberal hawk "humanitarian" wars this century. But as Kosovo descends again into political violence the war also foreshadowed what can go wrong, as Don North reported in this prescient story from 1999.

Clinton's Experience: Fact and Fantasy

Republished Feb. 21, 2016: Hillary Clinton's win in Saturday's Nevada caucuses and her big lead in South Carolina restore her status as Democratic frontrunner but lingering doubts about her honesty and her coziness to Big Money continue to dog her path to the White House, a problem that Barbara Koepfel identified during Clinton's first run in 2008.

Recalling the Slaughter of Innocents

Republished Feb. 17, 2016: The quarter-century anniversary of an early U.S. war crime in Iraq passed largely unnoticed this week, the bombing of a civilian air-raid shelter in Baghdad during President George H.W. Bush's Persian Gulf War, an atrocity that killed more than 400 women and children, as Ray McGovern recalled in 2011.

How Scalia Distorts the Framers

Republished Feb. 14, 2016: The late Supreme Court Justice Scalia put his right-wing ideology above any respect for the Constitution's Framers, even resorting to a made-up view attributed to Alexander Hamilton in Scalia's dissent to the landmark upholding of the Affordable Care Act, wrote Robert Parry in 2012.

Justice Scalia's 'Originalist' Hypocrisy

Republished Feb. 14, 2016: The death of U.S. Supreme Court Justice Scalia has prompted fawning eulogies about his legal brilliance and his heart-felt faith in constitutional "originalism," but the reality is that he twisted the Framers' thoughts into whatever was politically convenient, as Robert Parry noted in 2011.

Yemen as Vietnam or Afghanistan

Republished Jan. 25, 2016: With U.S. weapons, Saudi Arabia is waging a brutal air war on impoverished Yemen, turning a long-simmering civil war into a proxy fight with regional rival Iran, a scenario that reminded retired U.S. emissary William R. Polk of his work for President Kennedy on an earlier Yemeni war.

MLK's Warning of America's Spiritual Death

Republished Jan. 18, 2016: A year before his death, Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. broke with many political allies by warning that the Vietnam War was inflicting a "spiritual death" on America, casting King outside mainstream opinion circles which called his advice naive and irresponsible, as Gary G. Kohls recalled in 2014.

The Battle over Dr. King's Message

Republished Jan. 18, 2016: Martin Luther King Day is a rare moment in American life when people reflect on the ideals that guided Dr. King's life and led to his death. Thus, the struggle over his message is intense, pitting a bland conventional view against a radical call for profound change, said Brian J. Trautman in 2014.

MLK and the Curse of 'Moderation'

Republished Jan. 18, 2016: When Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. went to jail to focus national attention on the injustice of segregation, he was stung by criticism from Christian clergy who feared upsetting the status quo and urged "moderation," prompting his historic rejoinder from the Birmingham jail, as Rev. Howard Bess recalled in 2014.

Is WP's Cohen Dumbest Columnist?

Republished Dec. 30, 2015: Official Washington operates with a reverse "meritocracy," the more clueless the pundits are the more esteem they seem to get as long as they conform to the latest "group think." Washington Post columnist Richard Cohen is a prime example, Robert Parry noted in 2007.

America's Debt to Bradley Manning

Republished Dec. 17, 2015: The U.S. mainstream media is again embracing a U.N. report critical of Iran's alleged past work on a nuclear bomb, but leaks from Pvt. Bradley (now Chelsea) Manning exposed Yukiya Amano, the key U.N. official, as a front for U.S. and Israeli interests, as Robert Parry reported in 2011.

On the Trail of Turkey's Terrorist Grey Wolves

Republished Dec. 16, 2015: Turkey, as a NATO country near Russia's border, developed a powerful “deep state” where intelligence operatives, terrorists and gangsters crossed paths and shared political alliances, a grim reality that author Martin A. Lee explored in 1997 and a dark legacy that reaches to the present.

The Real Thanksgiving Day

Republished Nov. 26, 2015: On Thanksgiving Day, the United States celebrates the tradition of Pilgrims and Native Americans sitting down together in Plymouth, Massachusetts, in 1621 to celebrate each other as friendly neighbors. But the reality was not so pleasant, as historian William Loren Katz recalled.

Separating War from the Vets

Republished Nov. 11, 2015: On Veterans Day, Americans make a point of thanking men and women who have served in the U.S. Armed Forces. But this appreciation has the effect of shielding today’s perpetual warfare from the critical examination it deserves, as former Marine Matthew Hoh noted in 2012.

How Israel Out-Foxed US Presidents

Republished Nov. 9, 2015: As Israeli Prime Minister Netanyahu meets with President Obama, the mainstream media is asking who’s to blame for their chilly relationship. But the problem is not just personal. It goes to Israel’s longstanding efforts to out-fox U.S. presidents, as Morgan Strong described in 2010.

Hillary Clinton’s Failed Libya “Doctrine”

Republished Oct. 22, 2015: As the long-running Benghazi investigation returns to center stage with another round of Hillary Clinton’s testimony, the former Secretary of State’s larger failure remains obscured how she once envisioned the bloody Libyan “regime change” as the start of a “Clinton Doctrine,” as Robert Parry reported last July.

The More Complex Truth of Benghazi

Republished Oct. 22, 2015: More than three years after the Benghazi attack, which claimed the lives of four Americans, Republicans again are grilling former Secretary of State Hillary Clinton in the hyper-politicized inquiry that has obscured the more complex reality of what happened, as ex-CIA analyst Paul R. Pillar observed in 2013.

Ronald Reagan’s Bloody ‘Apocalypso’

Republished Oct. 12, 2015: As grotesque as it is to honor Christopher Columbus who set in motion a hemisphere-wide genocide against the indigenous population, it is also sickening to honor Ronald Reagan who aided and abetted genocide against Guatemalan tribes just last century, as Robert Parry reported in 2006.

Obama's True Foreign-Policy 'Weakness'

Republished Sep. 28, 2015: Official Washington considers President Obama "weak" because he doesn't bomb every country that the neocons want bombed, so Obama talks "tough" in his major speeches to conceal his real "weakness" his timidity in rebuffing neocon criticism as Robert Parry described in 2014.

Was Turkey Behind Syria Sarin Attack?

Republished Sep. 16, 2015: As Washington pundits again demand Syrian President Assad's ouster, a top talking point is that he "gassed his own people" in a Sarin attack in 2013. But that rush to judgment was picked apart by investigative journalist Seymour Hersh and others, as Robert Parry reported in spring 2014.

Reviving the 'Successful Surge' Myth

Republished Aug. 16, 2015: Over the past several years whenever American neocons say they should lead the way on national security, they invoke the "successful surge" myth, claiming that President George W. Bush's Iraq escalation in 2007 "won" the war and that President Obama pulled defeat from the jaws of victory, a fiction that Robert Parry dissected in 2014.

The Right's Made-up Constitution

Republished Jul. 1, 2015: Many Americans, especially Tea Partiers and Neo-Confederates, either haven't read the U.S. Constitution or insist on distorting its plain language which established federal supremacy over the states and empowered the central government to "provide for the general Welfare," as Jada Thacker noted in 2013.

Was Turkey Behind Syria Sarin Attack?

Republished Jun. 27, 2015: Turkey's history of "deep state" intelligence may have resurfaced in 2013, according to journalist Seymour Hersh, as Turkish-backed, Al-Qaeda-affiliated terrorists learned to make sarin and may have used it in Syria to trick the U.S. into joining that civil war, as Robert Parry reported in 2014.

On the Trail of Turkey's Terrorist Grey Wolves

Republished Jun. 27, 2015: Turkey, as a NATO country near Russia's border, developed a powerful “deep state” where intelligence operatives, terrorists and gangsters crossed paths and shared political alliances, a grim reality that author Martin A. Lee explored in 1997 and a dark legacy that reaches to the present.

The Bush Family ‘Oiligarchy’

Republished Jun. 12, 2015: The past often is prologue, making it especially important to know how a politician built his career and who helped him. In 2000, too little attention was paid to George W. Bush’s personal history and how it might shape his disastrous presidency, a void that Sam Parry tried to fill.

How Reagan’s Propaganda Succeeded

Republished Jun. 4, 2015: The U.S. political/media system is awash in propaganda drowning any rational debate about crucial foreign policy issues. But how did that happen? A key turning point was the Reagan administration’s pushback against public skepticism over Vietnam and CIA scandals of the 1970s, Robert Parry wrote in 2010.

One More Casualty of US Wars

Republished May 24, 2015: For many politicians, Memorial Day is just another chance to glorify war with little real remembrance of war’s horrors and waste, like the death of one young veteran a year ago, as recalled by Richard L. Fricker in one of his last articles before his own death from heart failure last Sept. 12.

Saddam’s Green Light

Republished May 11, 2015: An article from the first investigative series published at Consortiumnews in early 1996 revealed top-secret “talking points” used by Secretary of State Haig in 1981 to brief President Reagan about the Middle East, including an alleged U.S. “green light” for Iraq to invade Iran. Journalist Robert Parry found the document in old congressional files.

How Many Islamic State Fighters Are There?

Republished May 1, 2015: The mainstream U.S. media is marking the Vietnam War’s end 40 years ago with superficial remembrances that downplay the horror that the U.S. military inflicted on the Vietnamese. That prevents the real Vietnam lessons from illuminating today’s conflicts, as ex-CIA analyst Ray McGovern noted in 2014.

Gen. Petraeus: Too Big to Jail

Republished Apr. 23, 2015: Retired Gen. David Petraeus confessed on Thursday to giving sensitive government secrets to his mistress and then lying about it to the FBI, but will get no jail time, only two years probation and a fine, showing that he is too big to jail, as ex -CIA analyst Ray McGovern predicted in March.

Is Hillary Clinton a Neocon-Lite?

Republished Apr. 23, 2015: As Democrats line up behind Hillary Clinton as their presumptive 2016 presidential nominee, many are whistling past the graveyard of her disastrous record on foreign interventions, judgments that raise doubts about her fitness for the job, as Robert Parry observed in 2014.

When Journalists Join the Cover-Ups

Republished Apr. 7, 2015: Ex-New York Times reporter Judith Miller still insists only innocent mistakes were made in the phony claims used to justify invading Iraq, but what the case really showed was a systematic failure of the Washington press corps, as Robert Parry explained in a two-part series in 2005

Misunderstanding Jesus's Execution

Republished Apr.2, 2015: In Holy Week, many Christians celebrate what they regard as God's sacrifice of his Son and the Resurrection. But some scholars see another narrative in which Jesus, a rural rebel, brings his critique of the Jewish-Roman power structure to Jerusalem and is killed for it, as Rev. Howard Bess wrote in 2011.

How Mandela and S. Africa Were Freed

Republished Mar. 20, 2015: One of the great battles of Danny Schechter's life was the fight to end apartheid in South Africa, but he never soft-pedaled the challenges the country continued to face nor did he accept the revisionist history minimizing the role of millions in that global campaign for justice, as he wrote last year.

The Iron Law of Oligarchy Returns

Republished Mar. 20, 2015: The death of Danny Schechter, "the News Dissector," at age 72 from cancer marks a sad moment for independent journalism. Schechter's was a strong voice against the empty platitudes and blatant hypocrisies that have come to define modern American media and politics, as he explained in an article last year.

The Mysterious Death of a UN Hero

Republished Mar. 17, 2015: In reopening the investigation into the mysterious plane crash that killed UN Secretary General Dag Hammarskjold in 1961, the United Nations is appealing to member states to release long-secret files related to this cold case from a tense moment in the Cold War in Africa, which Lisa Pease examined in 2013.

LBJ's 'X' File on Nixon's 'Treason'

Republished Mar. 13, 2015: The letter to Iran from 47 Republican senators, seeking to kill President Obama's talks on limiting Iran's nuclear program, recalls other GOP sabotage of foreign policy by Democratic presidents, including Richard Nixon's scheme to stop a Vietnam peace deal in 1968, as Robert Parry wrote in 2012.

CIA at 50, Lost in the 'Politicization' Swamp

Republished Mar. 10, 2015: Almost 20 years ago even before the Iraq WMD fiasco as the CIA was celebrating its half-century anniversary, the impact of a Reagan-era "reorganization" was being felt in the "politicization" of intelligence, Robert Parry wrote in 1997. Now, a new reorganization could make matters worse.

Neocons Guided Petraeus on Afghan War

Republished Mar. 9, 2015: Before Gen. David Petraeus was caught giving secrets to his biographer-mistress, he was giving special favors and access to influential neocons, one reason why Official Washington was so happy that he received only a hand-slap for his crime, ties that Robert Parry examined in 2012.

A Dangerous CIA 'Reform'

Republished Mar. 9, 2015: Ignoring the CIA's original purpose to coordinate intelligence and provide unbiased analyses to U.S. presidents to avert another Pearl Harbor CIA Director Brennan is pressing ahead with a plan to merge operations with analysis, a scheme that ex-CIA analyst Melvin A. Goodman panned last year.

Ronald Reagan's Torture

Republished Feb. 10, 2015: George W. Bush's torture policies may have been extraordinary in the direct participation of U.S. personnel but they were far from unique, with Ronald Reagan having followed a similar path in his anti-leftist wars in Central America, as Robert Parry reported in 2009.

Haiti and America's Historic Debt

Republished Feb. 2, 2015: Some Americans view Haiti through a lens of racial bigotry, seeing the poverty-stricken Caribbean country as proof that black people can't govern themselves. But there is a very different historical narrative regarding America's profound debt to Haiti, as Robert Parry described in 2010.

The Battle Over Dr. King's Message

Republished Jan. 19, 2015: Martin Luther King Day is a rare moment in American life when people reflect even if only briefly on the ideals that guided Dr. King's life and led to his death. Thus, the struggle over his message is intense, pitting a bland conventional view against a radical call for profound change, says Brian J. Trautman.

MLK and the Curse of 'Moderation'

Republished Jan. 19, 2015: When Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. went to jail to focus national attention on the injustice of segregation, he was stung by criticism from Christian clergy who feared upsetting the status quo and urged "moderation," prompting his historic rejoinder from the Birmingham jail, as Rev. Howard Bess recalls

Did Manning Help Avert War in Iran?

Republished Dec. 21, 2014: A little-noticed disclosure from cables leaked by Pvt. Bradley (now Chelsea) Manning showed how the U.S. government put Yukiya Amano in as the UN's top nuclear inspector so he could hype claims about Iran building a nuclear bomb, as Robert Parry reported on the eve of Manning's sentencing in 2013.

Letting a Cuban Terrorist Go Free

Republished Dec. 17, 2014: As much as U.S. officials have decried "terrorism" even equating harboring a terrorist with the actual deed they have applied a completely different standard to "our" terrorists who are protected from extradition and treated with kid gloves, as Robert Parry reported in 2011.

Pinochet's Mad Scientist

Republished Dec. 15, 2014: Much like the 9/11 attacks, the Cold War plunged the U.S. government into the "dark side," especially in Latin America where the CIA colluded with torturers and assassins, leading to grisly murders and enduring mysteries, as Samuel Blixen described in 1999.

How Reagan Promoted Genocide

Republished Dec. 15, 2014: The Senate's torture report is provoking some rare self-reflection among Americans even as TV talk shows are dominated by torture apologists. But there is a larger context to America's modern embrace of the "dark side" including support for genocide, as Robert Parry reported in 2013.

The Sordid Contra-Cocaine Saga

Republished Dec. 13, 2014: It's been a decade since the big U.S. newspapers hounded journalist Gary Webb to suicide because he exposed their failure to stop one of Ronald Reagan's worst crimes: drug trafficking by the Nicaraguan Contras. The sordid saga finally was told by a Hollywood movie, Robert Parry noted in October.

How Reagan Enforced US Hypocrisy

Republished Dec. 13, 2014: To understand why many right-wingers are so defensive about offensive U.S. acts, even waterboarding and anal rape, you must look back to the Reagan years when "moral equivalence" became an accusation against applying universal standards to the U.S., as Robert Parry wrote last March about Ukraine.

The Right's Dubious Claim to Madison

Republished Dec. 3, 2014: Central to the question of whether America's Right is correct that the Constitution mandated a weak central government is the person of James Madison and what he and his then-fellow Federalists were doing at the Constitutional Convention in 1787, wrote Robert Parry in 2013.

The Battle for Palestine

Republished Oct. 23, 2014: You can't understand the worsening Mideast violence without knowing the modern history of Palestine, a story that begins with European anti-Semitism causing Zionists to claim Palestine for the Jews and to expel the Arabs, wrote retired U.S. diplomat William R. Polk in the first of three parts.

Guardrail Design Raises Concerns

Republished Oct. 13, 2014: The New York Times just published a front-page article about state officials worried that guardrail end units installed on highways across America could kill and maim people. But Consortiumnews readers knew this problem in February 2013 based on a groundbreaking story by Daniel J. Goldstein.

How Israel Out-Foxed US Presidents

Republished Oct. 2, 2014: After six years, Israeli Prime Minister Netanyahu has nearly weathered his chilly relationship with President Obama and can expect to coast through the next two years ignoring Obama's appeals. But Obama is not the first U.S. president to be played by Israel, as Morgan Strong wrote in 2010.

Hung Out to Dry

Republished Sep. 29, 2014: With Hollywood poised to release "Kill the Messenger," a movie showing how the mainstream U.S. media destroyed journalist Gary Webb for reviving the Contra-cocaine scandal in the mid-1990s, we are reposting Georg Hodel's 1997 account of how Webb was betrayed by his own editors.

Braveheart, Edward I, and Bush

Republished Sep. 18, 2014: As Scots vote on independence from Great Britain, part of the motivation for those voting "aye" is the brutal history of English repression of Scottish freedom, dating back centuries but fresh in the minds of many Scots, a lesson about unintended consequences of violence that should be remembered by today's politicians, as Robert Parry noted in 2005.

PRISM's Controversial Forerunner

Republished Sep. 15, 2014: Richard L. Fricker, a courageous journalist and frequent writer at Consortiumnews, died on Sept. 12 from heart failure. Among Fricker's important work was his investigation of the U.S. government's PROMIS software which preceded the NSA's Orwellian PRISM, as Fricker noted last July.

The Collapsing Syria-Sarin Case

Republished Sep. 20, 2014: At the first anniversary of the Sarin gas attack outside Damascus on Aug. 21, there is a concerted effort to reestablish the original conventional wisdom, blaming the Syrian government for the hundreds of deaths. The goal seems to be to bury the alternative narrative that later emerged, as Robert Parry wrote last April.

Likening Palestinians to Blades of Grass

Republished Aug. 5, 2014: As Israel's Operation Protective Edge winds down with more than 1,700 Gazans mostly civilians dead, Israeli leaders may feel they've finished a recurring chore, "mowing the grass" to eliminate troublesome Palestinians, as ex-CIA analyst Elizabeth Murray observed in 2012.

Can Obama Speak Strongly for Peace?

Republished May 26, 2014: President Obama is preparing a speech to address neocon charges that he's shown "weakness" toward U.S. adversaries, but the greater challenge would be for him to tell the people why cooperation with those adversaries is vital for real peace, as Robert Parry wrote in March.

Doubting Obama's Resolve to Do Right

Republished May 26, 2014: As President Obama prepares to make another speech explaining his foreign policy, the question is whether he can climb out of the rut of his previous whiny apologies for continuing many of George W. Bush's abuses, as ex-CIA analyst Ray McGovern wrote last year.

How Wall St. Bailed Out the Nazis

Republished May 14, 2014: Official Washington dismisses any reference to Ukraine's neo-Nazis as "Russian propaganda" because everyone knows that no respectable U.S. leader would get in bed with such people. But Wall Street bankers didn't have such qualms, Jerry Meldon reported in 2013.

Hitler's Shadow Reaches toward Today

Republished May 14, 2014: The key role of neo-Nazis in Ukraine's U.S.-backed coup is denied by the mainstream U.S. press, which can't believe the U.S. government would collaborate with such unsavory characters, but that isn't the real history, as Robert Parry reported in 2010.

Can Obama Speak Strongly for Peace?

Republished May 4, 2014: During the Cold War, two presidents delivered honest warnings to Americans, Eisenhower on the "military-industrial complex" and Kennedy on how "we all inhabit this small planet." Now Ukraine presents a challenge to President Obama to speak out for peace, as Robert Parry wrote in March.

Finding a Way to Execute

Republished Apr. 30, 2014: After getting a judge's stay reversed, Oklahoma officials pressed ahead with Clayton Lockett's lethal injection, only to have the botched execution leave him writhing in pain before finally dying of an apparent heart attack. In March, Richard L. Fricker sketched the case's grim background.

Misunderstanding Jesus's Execution

Republished Apr. 13, 2014: Over the centuries as Christianity bent to the interests of the rich and powerful, the story of Jesus's fateful week in Jerusalem was reshaped to minimize its pivotal event, overturning the Temple's money tables, a challenge to religious and political power, says Rev. Howard Bess.

Did Manning Help Avert War in Iran?

Republished Mar. 31, 2014: Many of the world's crises, like those in Syria and Ukraine, can be better understood by factoring in Israel's maneuvers to involve the U.S. in bombing Iran. Documents leaked by Pvt. Manning exposed how one such scheme might have played out, as Robert Parry wrote in 2013.

Firewall: Inside the Iran-Contra Cover-up

Republished Mar. 21, 2014: The death of Iran-Contra special prosecutor Lawrence Walsh on Wednesday at the age of 102 marked the passing of what is now rare in the American Establishment, a person who courageously fought for a truthful historical record, as Robert Parry explained in this 1997 review of Walsh's memoir, Firewall.

Standing Up to War and Hillary Clinton

Republished Feb. 21, 2014: Ex-CIA analyst Ray McGovern has filed suit over an incident three years ago when he was roughly arrested for standing, back turned to Secretary of State Clinton as she gave a speech on the right to dissent. McGovern also was placed on a special watch list. He described his arrest in 2011.

Obama Ignores Key Afghan Warning

Republished Feb. 7, 2014: As the 12-year Afghan War grinds to what many Americans see as failure, ex-Defense Secretary Robert Gates and other hawks won't admit their counterinsurgency "surge" in 2009 was a waste of lives and money or that U.S. Ambassador Karl Eikenberry was right when he warned President Obama, as ex-CIA analyst Ray McGovern wrote in 2010.

How Reagan Promoted Genocide

Republished Feb. 6, 2014: Both Republicans and Democrats fawn over the legacy of Ronald Reagan, who was born 103 years ago on Feb. 6, but the reality of his bloodstained presidency is much different from the pleasing memories. Reagan even promoted Guatemala's genocide, Robert Parry reported in 2013.

Ronald Reagan: Worst President Ever?

Republished Feb. 6, 2014: Ronald Reagan, who was born on Feb. 6, 1911, ranks among the most honored U.S. presidents of modern times with his name etched into public buildings across the country. Even Democrats shy from criticizing his legacy. But is this Reagan worship deserved, Robert Parry asked in 2009.

Dick Cheney: Son of the New Deal

Republished Jan. 30, 2014: In a coincidence of history, right-wing icon Dick Cheney shares the same birthday as liberal icon Franklin Roosevelt, Jan. 30. But the ironic link goes even deeper since in many ways it was FDR's New Deal that made Dick Cheney possible, as Robert Parry explained in 2011.

Israel's Hand in Guatemala's Genocide

Republished Jan. 14, 2014: As world leaders struggle to praise the late Israeli Prime Minister Ariel Sharon, infamous for abetting the 1982 massacre of Palestinian civilians at Sabra and Shatila in Lebanon, another grim chapter of Sharon's history was his role in the Guatemalan genocide, Robert Parry wrote in 2013.

The 'Surge' Myth's Deadly Result

Republished Jan. 6, 2014: Central to the neocons' narrative on the current Mideast crisis as Islamic terrorists seize territory in Iraq and Syria is that George W. Bush's "successful surge" in Iraq in 2007 had achieved "victory at last," but was squandered by President Obama. But that's a self-serving myth, as Robert Parry wrote in 2012.

The Mysterious Why of the Iraq War

Republished Jan. 6, 2014: As al-Qaeda-affiliated terrorists gain ground in Iraq and Syria, U.S. neocons are eager to focus attention on President Obama's "failure" to militarily dominate the Mideast; otherwise, Americans might recall how this mess got started, as Robert Parry wrote on the Iraq War's tenth anniversary.

Israeli Scholar Disputes Founding Myth

Republished Jan. 2, 2014: Israeli Prime Minister Netanyahu's demand that the Palestinians recognize Israel as "a Jewish state" and thus accept the Zionist narrative of the Diaspora may doom the latest peace talks. But the Diaspora narrative also represents bad history, as Mideast scholar Morgan Strong reported in 2009.

Did Manning Help Avert War in Iran?

Republished Dec. 27, 2013: President Obama's diplomatic breakthrough with Iran on its nuclear program still faces strong resistance, but the historic opening might have been disrupted if not for the leaks of Pvt. Bradley (Chelsea) Manning, who got a 35-year prison sentence as “thanks,” as Robert Parry reported last summer.

Behind Colin Powell’s Legend: Panama War

Republished Dec. 19, 2013: Though largely forgotten, the brief U.S. invasion of Panama in 1989 established key precedents that would reappear in later conflicts from the Persian Gulf and Kosovo to Afghanistan and Iraq policies shaped, in part, by Gen. Colin Powell, as Robert Parry and Norman Solomon wrote in 1996.

Contras, Dirty Money and CIA

Republished Dec. 19, 2013: On Dec. 20, 1989, President George H.W. Bush ordered the invasion of Panama to arrest Gen. Manuel Noriega on drug charges. The U.S. news media viewed the assault as a case of Bush seeking justice, but there was a darker back story of U.S. guilt, as Robert Parry reported in 1997.

The 2nd Amendment and Killing Kids

Republished Dec. 14, 2013: The comedy team Key and Peele cut through the Right’s Second Amendment madness best in a bit in which Peele travels back in time with Uzis to confront its authors over their careless wording. But there is nothing funny about piles of dead kids, victims of bad history, as Robert Parry wrote in 2013.

The NRA’s War on America

Republished Dec. 14, 2013: One year ago, 20 first-graders went off to school in Newtown, Connecticut, some surely thinking about the upcoming Christmas holidays. But they never came home, becoming along with six of their educators collateral damage in the NRA’s big-dollar war to boost gun sales, as Beverly Bandler noted last March.

Meaning of the War Over Christmas

Republished Dec. 5, 2013: The latest Christmas tradition is for Fox News and the Right to work “the base” into a lather over a supposed “War on Christmas,” but there is a larger message in how right-wing propaganda creates “victimhood,” as Robert Parry noted in 2005.

On Libya, Now They Tell Us

Republished Oct. 10, 2013: The U.S. capture of an alleged al-Qaeda terror leader in Libya underscores the failure of the major news media to give the public the full story during the military intervention that led to Muammar Gaddafi’s ouster and murder. Mainstream journalists behaved more like propagandists, as Robert Parry reported in 2011.

The Right's Made-Up Constitution

Republished Oct. 1, 2013: Behind the U.S. government shutdown is the Right's erroneous belief that the U.S. Constitution tightly limits the federal government and carves out broad powers for the states, a bogus history that suggests the Tea Partiers don't understand the Founding document, as historian Jada Thacker wrote in July 2013.

The Founders' Musket Mandate

Republished Oct. 1, 2013: At the center of the Republican shutdown of the U.S. government is the claim that a "mandate" requiring Americans to get health insurance violates Founding principles, but the Framers of the Constitution were comfortable with a similar mandate for an armed militia, as Robert Parry noted in 2012.

US Journalists and War Crime Guilt

Republished Sep. 5, 2013: With few exceptions, mainstream U.S. news personalities are again selling war to the American people, this time on Syria by asserting false certainty on who launched the Aug. 21 chemical weapons strike and pretending the Syrian government not the rebels blocked peace talks, a media crisis that lingers from the Iraq War, as Peter Dyer wrote in 2008.

How Truth Can Save Lives Republished Aug. 22, 2013: A vengeful U.S. military has sentenced Pvt. Bradley Manning to 35 years in prison for disclosing unpleasant truths about the Afghan and Iraq wars and other government deceptions. Manning's bravery inspired ex-CIA analyst Ray McGovern in 2010 to reflect on an earlier dilemma between secrecy and truth.

Reagan's Road to Climate Perdition

Republished Aug. 18, 2013: More than a quarter century after President Reagan ordered President Carter's solar panels removed from the White House roof, new ones are being installed, a belated nod to the foresight of one president and a rebuke to the blindness of another, as Sam Parry explained in 2012.

'42 and 44

Republished Aug. 14, 2013: American rightists and many Republicans continue to treat President Obama with a personal disrespect that reeks of racism: hoisting signs about his "Kenyan birth," laughing at him as a rodeo clown, wishing for his impeachment hostility that recalls the reaction to other African-American “firsts,” Robert Parry wrote last May.

How US Hubris Baited Afghan Trap

Republished Aug. 9, 2013: Even today more than two decades after the Soviet Union disappeared the Washington press corps views U.S.-Russian disputes through a one-way Cold War lens, with Moscow always at fault. But the reality is more complicated, as Robert Parry explained about Afghanistan in 2012.

Iran/Iraq ‘Defectors’ and Disinformation

Republished Aug. 8, 2013: For years, “defectors” from “enemy” states have supplied the U.S. government and media with propaganda that is eagerly repeated to justify economic, diplomatic or even military retaliation. That was the case with Iraq in 2003 and now with Iran, as Robert Parry reported in 2012.

Why WPost’s Hiatt Should Be Fired

Republished Aug. 6, 2013: The purchase of the Washington Post by Amazon’s Jeff Bezos gives the newspaper a chance to shed its neocon ideology and get back to sound journalism. But that will require a housecleaning of top editors and columnists who turned the Post into the neocons’ flagship, like Fred Hiatt, Robert Parry wrote .

Answering Helen Thomas on Why

Republished Jul. 21, 2013: Often annoying her press colleagues, the late Helen Thomas was one of the few Washington journalists who would shatter the predictable frame for discussing tough issues. When she heard lazy rationalizations, Thomas would press the policymaker on why, as ex-CIA analyst Ray McGovern wrote in 2010.

Standing Up for Helen Thomas

Republished Jul. 21, 2013: Helen Thomas, a courageous trailblazer for women covering power politics, has died at the age of 92. Though recalled for her tough questioning of presidents, her career was unceremoniously ended when her media colleagues ostracized her over a clumsy remark about Israel, Robert Parry reported in 2010.

Bush/Cheney Pulled Torture Strings

Republished Jun. 22, 2013: James Comey, President Obama's nominee to be FBI director, was a conservative Republican lawyer when he went to work for George W. Bush's administration and witnessed how the White House pulled the Justice Department's strings to get clearance for torture, as Robert Parry reported in 2010.

Cables Hold Clues to US-Iran Mysteries

Republished Jun. 21, 2013: Iran's election of Hassan Rowhani as president has raised hopes for a deal, with Iran accepting tighter constraints on its nuclear program and the West rolling back sanctions. But there has been a long and often secret history of double-dealing between Iran and the U.S., Robert Parry reported in 2010.

Ahmadinejad Won, Get Over It!

Republished Jun. 17, 2013: When the U.S. news media adopts a "conventional wisdom," it is hard to dislodge, as the narrative of Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad "stealing" the 2009 election shows. Though still politically pleasing to Big Media, the storyline was never supported by evidence, Robert Parry reported in 2010.

Richard Milhous W. Bush

Republished Jun. 14, 2013: Only public outrage global and domestic stands any hope of pushing back the National Security Agency's "surveillance state." As hard as that may be, there was success a decade ago disrupting President George W. Bush's Orwellian Total Information Awareness that Nat Parry described in 2002.

Hitler's Shadow Reaches toward Today

Republished Jun. 6, 2013: U.S. history took a dark turn in the aftermath of World War II as the Truman administration judged the Soviet Union and socialism bigger threats than the remnants of Nazism and other right-wing ideologies. So, Official Washington protected some of the world's worst killers, Robert Parry reported in 2010.

Argentina's Dapper State Terrorist

Republished May 17, 2013: Ex-Argentine dictator Jorge Rafael Videla, who died Friday in prison at 87, saw the Dirty War that killed some 30,000 people as an intellectual exercise in exterminating subversive thought even across generations by transferring babies of the "disappeared" to military families, as Marta Gurvich recounted in 1998.

Anti-War Message of Mother's Day

Republished May 12, 2013: Mother's Day has become a time to thank mothers for the hard work they do raising children and keeping families together, surely a worthy message. But the original Mother's Day in 1870 had a more political intent, urging mothers to stop the horrors of war, as Gary G. Kohls wrote in 2011.

The Almost Scoop on Nixon's 'Treason'

Republished May 8, 2013: Former Vietnam War correspondent Beverly Deepe Kever has just published a memoir, Death Zones & Darling Spies, in which she addresses her almost scoop on Richard Nixon's 1968 sabotage of the Vietnam peace talks, a story that could have changed history, as Robert Parry reported in 2012.

Obama's Sub-Prime Conflict

Republished May 2, 2013: President Obama has nominated Hyatt Hotels heiress Penny Pritzker to be the next Commerce Secretary. Pritzker, also a major fundraiser for Obama's two presidential campaigns, faced controversy because of her role in the sub-prime mortgage disaster, as Dennis J. Bernstein reported in 2008.

America's Matrix

Republished Apr. 3, 2013: A decade ago, as U.S. troops gained control of Iraq, there were many false alarms about finding WMD, leading to President Bush declaring the discovery of mobile biological weapons labs. Robert Parry led the way in challenging that bogus claim in this analysis of America's false reality.

US Journalists and War Crime Guilt

Republished Mar. 21, 2013: Not only have George W. Bush and the Iraq War architects skated away from meaningful accountability, but so too have the media figures who provided the propaganda framework for the illegal invasion, a break with a principle sternly enforced at Nuremberg, Peter Dyer wrote in 2008.

Evita, the Swiss and the Nazis

Republished Mar. 16, 2013: Jorge Bergoglio's election to be Pope Francis has revived troubling questions about the Catholic Church's role in the Argentine "dirty war" and other right-wing repression in Latin America of the 1970s and '80s. But the history goes back to ties to the Nazis, as the late Georg Hodel wrote in 1999.

Argentina's Dapper State Terrorist

Republished Mar. 15, 2013: As Argentina's Dirty War killed some 30,000 people, including 150 Catholic priests, dictator Jorge Rafael Videla kept up good relations with Jorge Bergoglio, now Pope Francis, who admits the Church should have done more given the horrors, as described by Marta Gurvich in 1998.

Iran-Contra's 'Lost Chapter'

Republished Mar. 14, 2013: In 1987, amid the Iran-Contra inquiry, investigators found that the scandal fit within a larger Republican scheme for manipulating American public opinion through CIA-style disinformation. But GOP senators blocked inclusion of the chapter in the final report, Robert Parry wrote in 2008.

Mother of the Sit-Down Strike

Republished Mar. 8, 2013: During the late-Nineteenth-Century struggles against America's Robber Barons and the Ku Klux Klan, Lucy Gonzales Parsons was a brave fighter for human rights. In recognition of International Women's Day, we are re-posting William Loren Katz's account of her remarkable life.

Mystery of a 'Disgraced' War Reporter

Republished Mar. 2, 2013: The saying goes: "truth is the first casualty of war." But it's also true that war-time truth-tellers often end up as "collateral damage." A new book, Inappropriate Conduct, tells the story of a World War II correspondent whose career was crushed by the intrigue he uncovered, as Don North reported in 2010.

The Depressing 'Zero Dark Thirty'

Republished Feb. 24, 2013: Director Kathryn Bigelow won an Oscar for "The Hurt Locker" and is in the running again with "Zero Dark Thirty," but both movies have a troubling undercurrent of racism, heroic Americans operating in a world of apathetic or crazy Muslims, wrote Robert Parry.

An Incurious 'Zero Dark Thirty'

Republished Feb. 24, 2013: "Zero Dark Thirty," the big-screen chronicling of the manhunt for Osama bin Laden, won critical acclaim for its taut storytelling, but the Oscar-nominated film ignored the complex history between the CIA and its terrorist target, wrote Jim DiEugenio.

The Dark Side of 'Zero Dark Thirty'

Republished Feb. 24, 2013: The hunt-for-bin-Laden film, "Zero Dark Thirty," portrays torture as a key element in that search. But the filmmakers distorted the facts and ignored the reality that torture is illegal, immoral and dangerously ineffective, wrote Marjorie Cohn.

Hit Movies Miss Mideast Realities

Republished Feb. 24, 2013: Two Oscar favorites "Argo" and "Zero Dark Thirty" purport to tell real-life stories about America's troubles in the Middle East, one an escape-from-Iran thriller and the other a get-bin-Laden film. But neither confronts some hard realities, wrote Winslow Myers.

Waking Up to Iran's Real History

Republished Feb. 24, 2013: An Oscar frontrunner for best picture is "Argo," depicting a little-known chapter of the U.S-Iran hostage standoff in 1979-81. Yet, while focusing on this story of six hostages escaping, "Argo" missed bigger dramas, before and after, as David Swanson explained.

The Almost Vanunu

Republished Feb. 19, 2013: The strange saga of how Israel "disappeared" Australian-born Ben Zygier into a high-security jail as "Prisoner X" and how he died under suspicious circumstances sheds new light on Israel's efforts to silence ex-intelligence officer Ari Ben-Menashe in the 1990s, as Marshall Wilson reported in 2012.

The Thwarting of Catholic Reform

Republished Feb. 12, 2013: Pope Benedict XVI's abdication ends the career of a Catholic intellectual who understood the need for Church reform but joined with John Paul II and other conservatives to protect an autocratic system that failed to stop pedophile priests or meet the needs of the faithful, wrote Catholic theologian Paul Surlis in 2012.

The Iraq War 'Surge' Myth Returns

Republished Jan. 31, 2013: Sen. John McCain and other Republicans cited Chuck Hagel's opposition to the Iraq War "surge" as their chief attack line to block his nomination to be Defense Secretary, but Hagel refused to accept their distortion of history, defying a cherished myth of Official Washington, which Robert Parry described.

Slanting the Case on Iran's Nukes

Republished Jan. 12, 2013: The New York Times reports UN nuclear monitoring chief Yukiya Amano is dampening hopes for new nuclear talks with Iran by demanding access to its Parchin military base. But the press still ignores evidence Amano is no honest broker, but part of the U.S./Israel camp, as Robert Parry reported in 2011.

Where Rachel Maddow Dares Not Tread

Republished Jan. 9, 2013: On domestic politics, MSNBC has provided some balance to the hard-right bent of Fox News, but the liberal-oriented network won't diverge much from Washington's hawkish foreign policy orthodoxy, especially on the Middle East, a reality that Marquette professor Daniel C. Maguire observed in 2011.

Kicking the Vietnam Syndrome

Republished Dec. 28, 2012: With Gen. Norman Schwarzkopf's death on Thursday and the declining health of ex-President George H.W. Bush an era of war and intrigue is coming to an end, a time of resurgent U.S. imperialism that saw this warrior seeking peace and the politician wanting war, as Robert Parry wrote in 2011.

The Why Behind the Benghazi Attack

Republished Dec. 20, 2012: A State Department inquiry found serious lapses in security at the U.S. mission in Benghazi, Libya, where the U.S. ambassador and three other Americans died in an assault last Sept. 11. But the CIA's connection is still downplayed, as ex-CIA analyst Melvin A. Goodman noted last month.

America: A Nation of Wildebeest

Republished Dec. 15, 2012: As the United States wrestles with the latest gun massacre this time aimed at Connecticut kindergarteners the real question is the character of American adults, many of whom punish gun-control advocates at the polls. Is America a nation of wildebeest, as Robert Parry asked after an earlier massacre.

The Warning in Gary Webb's Death

Republished Dec. 9, 2012: Modern U.S. history is more complete because journalist Gary Webb had the courage to revive the dark story of the Reagan administration's protection of Nicaraguan Contra cocaine traffickers in the 1980s. But Webb ultimately paid a terrible price, as Robert Parry reports.

John Hull's Great Escape

Republished Dec. 9, 2012: The U.S. political/media world often operates without justice. Truth-tellers get punished and the well-connected get off. On this eighth anniversary of journalist Gary Webb's suicide, we are re-posting one of the stories that Webb's brave work forced out, albeit without a satisfying ending.

Meaning of the War Over Christmas

Republished Dec. 4, 2012: In the month-long (or even longer) "Christmas season," there is much faux outrage from Fox News and the Right about a "war on Christmas," even as public places are adorned with Christmas decorations and Christmas music fills the air, as Robert Parry noted in 2005.

Israeli Scholar Disputes Founding Myth

Republished Nov. 19, 2012: As Israel again "mows the grass" in Gaza taking revenge on Palestinians for firing crude missiles into Israeli territory the myth upon which the Jewish government stakes its claim to the land is front and center. But the myth faces challenges even inside Israel, as Morgan Strong reported in 2009.

How Israel Out-Foxed US Presidents

Republished Nov. 19, 2012: Just days after President Obama's reelection, Israel launched a punishing bombing campaign against Palestinians in Gaza much as Israel did shortly after his election in 2008. Obama again is put in a tight spot, but other U.S. presidents faced similar challenges, as Morgan Strong reported in 2010.

The Price of Political Purity

Republished Oct. 29, 2012: War with Iran is on the Nov. 6 ballot with President Obama on the verge of a peace deal and Mitt Romney favoring confrontation. The choice is like 1968 when many on the Left distrusted President Johnson's Vietnam peace promises and enabled Richard Nixon to extend the war four years, Robert Parry noted last June.

Jesus: Redistributionist-in-Chief

Republished Sep. 20, 2012: Christian conservatives are cheering Mitt Romney's attack on a 14-year-old comment by Barack Obama endorsing a limited "redistribution" of wealth, but they ignore that Jesus called for a far more radical wealth redistribution and it may have led to his crucifixion, as Rev. Howard Bess wrote in 2011.

Neocons Regroup on Libyan War

Republished Sep. 13, 2012: The assault by radical Islamists on the U.S. consulate in Benghazi, killing U.S. Ambassador to Libya J. Christopher Stevens and three of his aides, underscores the under-reported risk of the U.S.-backed military campaign against Libyan dictator Muammar Gaddafi, as Robert Parry noted in 2011.

How Rev. Moon's 'Snakes' Infested US

Republished Sep. 2, 2012: The death of Rev. Sun Myung Moon at 92 ends the long personal saga of a Korean theocrat whose life intertwined his bizarre religion with threads into organized crime and right-wing politics. Moon also showed how a fortune spent on media could change Washington's political dynamic, as Robert Parry wrote in 2010.

Recalling a Young American's Sacrifice

Republished Aug. 28, 2012: An Israeli court has ruled that Rachel Corrie "put herself in danger" and thus Israel bears no blame for the 23-year-old American being crushed by an Israeli bulldozer as it leveled Palestinian homes in Gaza in 2003. Last March, the ninth anniversary of her death, her parents recalled her sacrifice.

Dick Cheney: Son of the New Deal

Republished Aug. 20, 2012: As Republicans and the Tea Party seek to dismantle the New Deal's social contract, one of their heroes, Dick Cheney, concedes that his personal success traces back to the federal government's intervention against the depredations inflicted on Americans by "free-market" capitalism, writes Robert Parry.

More US Soldiers Die in Vain

Republished Aug. 6, 2012: One year ago, 30 U.S. soldiers many from SEAL Team 6 died when a helicopter was shot down in Afghanistan, deaths that ex-CIA analyst Ray McGovern said, tragically, were in vain. Though the war has faded from view, the killing goes on, 46 U.S. dead in July, eight more last week.

July 14, 2003: A Day of Infamy

Republished Jul. 14, 2012: July 14 is a French holiday celebrating the 1789 liberation of the Bastille prison in Paris, leading to the overthrow of the monarchy. But there were less auspicious events connected to that date in 2003, during the autocratic presidency of George W. Bush, ex-CIA analyst Ray McGovern wrote in 2007.

Lockerbie Doubts

Republished May 23, 2012: In 2009, when Scotland released Libyan Ali al-Megrahi after his prostate cancer was deemed terminal, U.S. and UK polls and pundits thundered against freeing the “Lockerbie bomber,” an outrage reprised this week after his death. But Megrahi’s odd conviction was not questioned, as Lisa Pease noted.

Pan Am 103 Verdict: Justice or Politics?

Republished May 23, 2012: With the death of Ali al-Megrahi over the weekend, the Western press was again filled with references to him as the “Lockerbie bomber,” even though the New York Times finally conceded how dubious his conviction was. At Consortiumnews.com, William Blum made that point in real time.

To Save the Republic, Tax the Rich?

Republished May 10, 2012: The urgent question facing the advanced capitalistic societies of Europe and the United States is: can “free markets” still meet the people’s needs or will those needs be sacrificed to the market’s demand for “austerity”, and if so, what does that mean for democracy, as Robert Parry asked in 2009.

Method to Republican ‘Madness’

Republished May 5, 2012: Robert Draper’s new book, Do Not Ask What Good We Do, describes Newt Gingrich and other Republicans plotting on Barack Obama’s Inauguration Day how to sink his presidency. But that plot has been obvious for years in GOP obstruction of Obama’s recovery plans, as Robert Parry noted in 2010.

Finishing a Job: Obama Gets Osama

Republished May 1, 2012: One year ago, President Obama announced the killing of Osama bin Laden, ending a near-decade-long manhunt. Amid U.S. celebrations, it was largely forgotten that the delay in getting the terrorist leader resulted from blunders by George W. Bush and his neocon advisers, Robert Parry wrote in 2011.

Bush Did Lie About Iraq

Republished Apr. 26, 2012: Some loyalists still defend President George W. Bush’s honesty by insisting he really believed the bogus intelligence on Iraq’s WMD and, true, it is impossible to know what was in his mind. But Bush did lie about Iraq’s WMD in another way, as Robert Parry explained in 2010.

Spy v. Spy: the First Patriots Day

Republished Apr. 19, 2012: The real Patriots Day not the Monday holiday observed in Massachusetts falls on April 19, honoring the Minutemen who rallied against a British strike at Lexington and Concord in 1775. The British were thwarted, in large part, because of a little known patriot, as Robert Parry recalled in 2011.

Who Commits Terrorism?

Republished Apr. 17, 2012: Nordic/Christian terrorist Anders Behring Breivik admitted killing 77 people last summer but claimed “self-defense,” protecting Christian culture from Muslims and “multiculturalists.” His writings show he was inspired by anti-Muslim bigotry spread by U.S. “experts,” Robert Parry explained in 2011.

Easter Hope: Justice Against Torture

Republished Apr. 7, 2012: Celebrating Easter in 2009, ex-CIA analyst Ray McGovern saw progress toward ending the Iraq War and hope that George W. Bush and other U.S. war criminals might finally face justice. Three years later, however, many of those dreams of accountability remain unfulfilled.

Misunderstanding Jesus’s Execution

Republished Apr. 1, 2012: Over the centuries as Christianity bent to the interests of the rich and powerful, the story of Jesus’s fateful week in Jerusalem was reshaped to minimize perhaps its central event, his overturning of the money tables at the temple, a challenge to the merging of religious and political power, says Rev. Howard Bess.

Welcome to Vietnam, Mr. President

Republished Mar. 17, 2012: Three years ago, President Obama ignored warnings about an Afghan quagmire and followed the advice of Bush administration holdovers into a series of troop “surges” that have cost many lives but not turned around the war, a result that ex-CIA analyst Ray McGovern foresaw at the time.

Republicans, a Threat to the Republic?

Republished Mar. 13, 2012: As Americans watch HBO’s “Game Change” about Election 2008 and reflect on the madcap Republican presidential race of 2012 they confront again the GOP’s modern tendency to promote patently unfit individuals for high office, as Robert Parry observed in 2009 when Sarah Palin resigned as Alaska’s governor.

Why Are McCain Backers So Angry?

Republished Mar. 13, 2012: HBO’s “Game Change” shows John McCain’s presidential campaign recklessly picking Alaska Gov. Sarah Palin as his running mate and then learning she lacked basic knowledge about the world. However, as Robert Parry reported in 2008, the campaign still went for the jugular against Barack Obama.

Slanting the Case on Iran's Nukes

Republished Feb. 23, 2012: As the International Atomic Energy Agency clashes with Iran over access to a military site, the U.S. government and mainstream news media are denouncing Iran. But no one recalls the WikiLeaks documents that exposed the bias of the new IAEA leaders, as Robert Parry reported in 2011.

Onward-Marching Christian Soldiers

Republished Feb. 23, 2012: In 2008, Rick Santorum declared, "Satan has his sights on the United States of America." Though sounding odd to many, Santorum's Satan talk is common among right-wing Christians who have intervened in U.S. politics before, like President Clinton's impeachment, as Frederick Clarkson noted in this 1998 article.

Ronald Reagan: Worst President Ever?

Republished Feb. 20, 2012: On Presidents' Day, opinion polls rate the greatest U.S. presidents, with Ronald Reagan now typically scoring at or near the top, and George W. Bush at or near the bottom. Though the Bush rating is hard to dispute, Robert Parry argued in 2009 that Reagan deserved a similar placement.

Standing Up to War and Hillary Clinton

Republished Feb. 15, 2012: A year ago, ex-CIA analyst Ray McGovern protested a speech by Secretary of State Hillary Clinton by standing in protest, before being assaulted by security guards and arrested. McGovern's non-violent act became part of a year of protest against powerful forces ignoring the people's will.

Bush's My Lai

Republished Jan. 31, 2012: Last week's decision by a U.S. military court to give no jail time to the sergeant in charge of troops at the Haditha massacre of 24 unarmed Iraqis means no serious penalties for anyone associated with what, in 2006, Robert Parry called "Bush's My Lai."

Israel's Troubling Tilt Toward Apartheid

Republished Jan. 16, 2012: Though it remains risky in U.S. media and political circles to criticize Israel, there is a growing alarm even at the New York Times about the extremist trends of Israel's ultra-Orthodox who are demanding segregation by sex, ethnicity and religious practices, as Robert Parry noted in this 2010 article.

Cables Hold Clues to US-Iran Mysteries

Republished Dec. 31, 2011: As the West's confrontation with Iran grows more dangerous and major U.S. news outlets blame Iran it may be worth recalling the documents that revealed how the U.S. and its allies showed bad faith in talks with Iran about its nuclear program, as Robert Parry reported in 2010.

Bush's Grim Vision

Republished Dec. 27, 2011: After 9/11, President George W. Bush expanded his powers to act unilaterally abroad and encroach on constitutional rights at home, a process that Congress continues in the just-approved National Defense Authorization Act of 2012. Nearly a decade ago, Nat Parry examined Bush's grim vision.

Shame on Us All

Republished Dec. 25, 2011: Congress keeps expanding government powers in the "war on terror" even when President Obama doesn't ask for them, unlike President George W. Bush who proudly signed the Military Commissions Act, a precursor to the indefinite detention in today's National Defense Authorization Act, as described by Robert Parry in 2006.

What Christmas Owes to Abolitionists

Republished Dec. 23, 2011: In the pre-Civil War years of the United States, Abolitionists and other social reformers transformed Christmas into a season for addressing the abuses of slavery and mistreatment of children, creating symbols and traditions that endured, writes William Loren Katz.

Braveheart, Edward I and Bush

Republished Dec. 21, 2011: This week, House Republicans fancied themselves reliving Braveheart's Battle of Stirling as they blocked a compromise to extend a tax cut for 160 million working Americans after having protected tax breaks for the rich a misguided metaphor from the Scottish patriot's real history that Robert Parry researched in 2005.

Meaning of the War Over Christmas

Republished Dec. 20, 2011: It's Christmastime again, so just as families pull their tree ornaments and lawn decorations out of storage, Fox News and other right-wing media outlets dust off their annual outrage over the so-called “war on Christmas,” which is just as phony now as it was when Robert Parry addressed the topic in 2005.

America’s Matrix

Republished Dec. 15, 2011: The declared end of the Iraq War leaves behind not only scars from eight-plus years of violence but questions about how the American people got lured into the disaster, a question that Robert Parry addressed only a month after President George W. Bush celebrated “Mission Accomplished.”

Bay of Pigs Meets Black Hawk Down

Republished Dec. 15, 2011: Unrepentant Iraq War hawks accuse President Obama of snatching defeat from the jaws of victory by completing the withdrawal of U.S. combat forces. But the terrible arc of George W. Bush’s invasion was apparent to some military analysts from the war’s first days, as Robert Parry reported just 11 days into the conflict.

Israeli Scholar Disputes Founding Myth

Republished Dec. 13, 2011: Republican presidential frontrunner Newt Gingrich seems to be laying the groundwork for ethnically cleansing Palestinians from Greater Israel, calling them “an invented people” who “had a chance to go many places.” But an Israeli scholar offered a contrary view, as Morgan Strong reported.

NYT’s New Contra Lies

Republished Dec. 11, 2011: While preparing the Dec. 9 article on Gary Webb, we pulled up a 1998 article that helps explain how inconvenient facts from recent U.S. history sometimes get “found” and then “lost” again. That summer, a CIA report exposing Nicaraguan Contra drug trafficking forced the New York Times to admit the point, but it soon forgot.

John Hull’s Great Escape

Republished Dec. 9, 2011: The U.S. political/media world often operates without justice. Truth-tellers get punished and the well-connected get off. On this seventh anniversary of journalist Gary Webb’s suicide, we are re-posting one of the stories that Webb’s brave work forced out, albeit without a satisfying ending.

The Real Thanksgiving Day

Republished Nov. 24, 2011: On Thanksgiving Day, the United States celebrates the tradition of Pilgrims and Native Americans sitting down together in Plymouth, Massachusetts, in 1621 to celebrate each other as friendly neighbors. But the reality was not so pleasant, as historian William Loren Katz recalled.

How Israel Out-Foxed US Presidents

Republished Nov. 17, 2011: At the G20 summit, French President Nicolas Sarkozy commiserated with President Barack Obama about Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu, whom Sarkozy called a “liar,” prompting Obama to say: “You’re fed up with him? I have to deal with him every day.” But struggling with Israeli leaders is not new, Morgan Strong reported.

Reagan and Guatemala’s Death Files

Republished Nov. 3, 2011: A 9-foot-high bronze statue honoring President Ronald Reagan has been unveiled at National Airport, continuing the deification of the right-wing icon. Left out of the celebration was anything about Reagan’s dark side, as Robert Parry recounted in this article from 1999.

Pan Am 103 Verdict: Justice or Politics?

Republished Oct. 20, 2011: As U.S. policymakers and pundits celebrate the brutal murder of Libyan strongman Muammar Gaddafi, his torture and execution are being justified by glib references to his purported role in the Pan Am 103 bombing in 1988. But William Blum found a different reality in the records.

Through the US Media Lens Darkly

Republished Oct. 20, 2011: U.S. officials are congratulating themselves after NATO aircraft bombed a convoy fleeing the Libyan town of Sirte, leading to the capture and murder of Muammar Gaddafi the grisly affair justified by Gaddafi’s supposed role in the bombing of Pan Am 103. But the evidence goes in a different direction, Robert Parry wrote.

Baby-Snatching: Argentine Dirty Secret

Republished Oct. 9, 2011: In Argentina, a case of a 35-year-old woman may finally prove that military officers in the Dirty War of the 1970s had a systemic scheme for stealing babies from female dissidents who were murdered. In this 1997 article, Argentine journalist Marta Gurchich examined one of these shocking cases.

Reagan’s Bargain/Charlie Wilson’s War

Republished Oct. 7, 2011: At the 10th anniversary of the U.S. war in Afghanistan, we are re-publishing two articles by Washington insiders, CIA analyst Peter W. Dickson and lobbyist Bruce P. Cameron. Both issued unheeded warnings about the looming catastrophe Dickson while at the CIA in the 1980s, alarmed by Pakistan's progress toward a nuclear bomb.

Why Afghanistan Really Fell Apart

Republished Oct. 7, 2011: A mythology has long surrounded why America got into its 10-year-long Afghan war, based on the false premise that Washington's big mistake was abandoning Afghanistan after the Soviets departed in 1989. The reality was quite different, as foreign policy expert Bruce P. Cameron explained.

Inside US Counterinsurgency

Republished Sep. 24, 2011: Stan Goff, the ex-U.S. Special Forces soldier who helped Pat Tillman's family expose the Army's cover-up of the former NFL star's friendly fire death in Afghanistan, wrote this story about his own military experience. It was published at Consortiumnews.com on Dec. 22, 1999.

Chronicling America's 9/11 Descent

Republished Sep. 11, 2011: The terror attacks on Sept. 11, 2001, sent the United States into a 10-year downward spiral, not because of the attacks themselves but because of disastrous political judgments that followed. In recognition of the tenth anniversary, we have compiled six articles by Robert Parry, chronicling this decade of descent, starting just two weeks after 9/11.

A 9/11 "What If?"

Republished Sep. 8, 2011: In recognition of the tenth anniversary of the 9/11 attacks, we will be publishing some past stories about the consequences of that momentous day. On Sept. 11, 2008, the seventh anniversary, Peter Dyer reflected on "what if" the United States had responded with demands for justice, not wars of conquest.

Television Wars: Bombing Serb TV

Republished Apr. 27, 2011: As the 1999 air war on Serbia becomes a model for Libya today, a reminder of what that civilian toll was. By Don North

Heeding George Kennan's Sage Advice

Republished Apr. 10, 2011: The Vietnam War advice of legendary Foreign Service officer George Kennan applies to the Afghan War, too. By Ray McGovern

How Two Elections Changed America

Republished Mar. 9, 2011: Henry Kissinger's shadowy machinations influenced the outcomes of two key U.S. elections, 1968 and 1980. By Robert Parry

Bush's Interrogators Stressed Nudity

Republished Mar. 4, 2011: Pvt. Bradley Manning's forced nudity recalls how the Bush administration broke down suspected terrorists. By Robert Parry

Reagan's Bargain/Charlie Wilson's War

Republished Feb. 1, 2011: Pakistan's nuclear arsenal, now totaling 100 or so bombs, is another part of Ronald Reagan's legacy. By Peter W. Dickson

Argentina's Dapper State Terrorist

Republished Dec. 29, 2010: Argentina has finally brought ex-dictator Rafael Videla to justice, but America still honors his protector, Ronald Reagan.

The Christian Myth of Jesus's Birth

Republished Dec. 24, 2010: As Christianity again gives cover for war, even pleasant myths about Jesus's birth demand a more skeptical examination.

Time to Apologize to Plame/Wilson

Republished Nov. 14, 2010: Official Washington's "Fair Game" abuse of CIA officer Valerie Plame and her husband Joe Wilson went beyond the White House.

Did Rove's Pro-Obama Puff-up Resumé?

Republished Oct. 28, 2010: Arkansas GOP congressional candidate Tim Griffin attacks our past reporting about his lack of courtroom experience.

Our Unheeded Warnings to Obama

Republished Sep. 30, 2010: After Barack Obama won the White House, Robert Parry issued three warnings that were ignored about dangers ahead.

Hung Out to Dry

Republished Jun. 22, 2010: Journalist Georg Hodel, who died June 20, described the betrayal of himself and Gary Webb in the contra-cocaine scandal.

Evita, the Swiss and the Nazis

Republished Jun. 22, 2010: The late journalist Georg Hodel traced the post-WWII trail of Eva Peron to Switzerland in aiding the Nazi exodus to Argentina.

El Salvador: Ghosts at the Polls

Republished Mar. 24, 2010: Three decades ago today, El Salvador's Archbishop Romero was slain, sending shock waves across the ages. By Don North

Bay of Pigs Meets Black Hawk Down

Republished Mar. 10, 2010: Newsweek declares "victory at last" in Iraq, but there is a case that the U.S. “loss” dated from the first weeks. By Robert Parry

Al Haig & a ‘Green Light’ to Chaos

Republished Feb. 21, 2010: In 1981, Secretary of State Al Haig wrote a ‘top secret’ memo on a ‘green light’ to chaos. By Robert Parry

Why Afghanistan Really Fell Apart

Republished Feb. 10, 2010: Contrary to conventional wisdom, the U.S. didn’t abandon the Afghan rebels once the Soviets left. By Bruce P. Cameron

Bush Silences a Dangerous Witness

Republished Jan. 26, 2010: Iraq’s hanging of “Chemical Ali” – like Saddam Hussein in 2006 – means one less witness on Bush Family crimes. By Robert Parry

George W. Bush’s Sci-Fi Disaster

Republished Jan. 20, 2010: At the first anniversary of the Obama presidency, a look-back at the scene of George W. Bush’s departure. By Robert Parry

How Not to Counter Terrorism

Republished Jan. 14, 2010: Ex-FBI Agent Coleen Rowley warned of flooding the counter-terror analysts with too much data. January 14, 2010

Pinochet’s Mad Scientist

Republished Dec. 9, 2009: Chile’s Pinochet dictatorship stands accused of killing a rival with poisons, a mystery with deep roots. By Samuel Blixen.

Israeli Scholar Disputes Founding Myth

Republished Dec. 3, 2009: In a new book, Israeli scholar Shlomo Sand argues that the Roman-era Diaspora was a historical myth. By Morgan Strong.

Colin Powell’s My Lai Connection

Republished Dec. 2, 2009: The Afghan War escalation recalls Colin Powell’s tie to an earlier war and its war crimes. By Robert Parry and Norman Solomon.

Rev. Moon’s Troubled Generation Next

Republished Nov. 11, 2009: The right-wing Washington Times is caught in a messy succession for Rev. Sun Myung Moon’s empire. By Robert Parry.

Ronald Reagan’s Bloody ‘Apocalypto’

Republished Oct. 9, 2009: An irony of Columbus Day is that crimes of the early conquerors are better known than more recent atrocities. By Robert Parry

PanAm 103 Verdict: Justice or Politics?

Republished Aug. 18, 2009: The Obama administration won’t question the weak evidence in the PanAm 103 bombing conviction. By William Blum

CIA: Osama Helped Bush in '04

Republished Aug. 22, 2009: Osama bin Laden's pre-election video in 2004 was viewed at the CIA as a bid to boost George W. Bush. By Robert Parry

Bush's Conspiracy to Riot

Republished Aug. 5, 2009: Today's right-wing disruptions of health-care "town halls" harken back to George W. Bush's riot in 2000. By Robert Parry

The Left's Media Miscalculation

Republished Jul. 29, 2009: A look back at how the American Left squandered its media advantage and aided the Right's ascendancy. By Robert Parry

GOP & KAL007: 'The Key Is to Lie First'

Republished Jul. 20, 2009: A case study of how Ronald Reagan and the Republicans mastered the Big Lie a quarter century ago. By Robert Parry

The Wedding

Republished Jul. 15, 2009: An explanation of why Dick Cheney would be so audacious to hide a covert action from Congress. By Robert Parry

America's Matrix

Republished Jul. 1, 2009: A look-back at how we exposed George W. Bush's deceptions at the start of the Iraq War. By Robert Parry

Rev. Moon, North Korea & the Bushes

Republished Jun. 16, 2009: A look-back on the Rev. Sun Myung Moon's secret financial ties to North Korean and U.S. leaders. By Robert Parry
